MetLife Resources supports school business officials with Bridges to the Future scholarships

MetLife Resources recently assisted 20 new and aspiring school business officials to continue developing their knowledge and professional skills in the field, through sponsorship of the Bridges to the Future scholarship program. MetLife Resources partnered with the Association of School Business Officials International to provide each honoree with a $2,000 scholarship to attend the 2010 ASBO International annual meeting in Orlando, Fla.

"Our schools depend on strong leadership from school business officials for success," said Tom Hogan, senior vice president of MetLife Resources. "MetLife is proud to support the development of new administrators through the Bridges to the Future scholarship program."

MetLife Resources specializes in providing retirement plans and other financial services to education, health care and not-for-profit organizations. MetLife is a strategic partner of ASBO International, a professional organization that promotes the highest standards of school business management practices, professional growth, and the effective use of educational resources.

Scholarship recipients had the opportunity to network with their peers, attend a special pre-conference workshop and obtain free access to the ASBO International Live Learning Center, which features more than 82 hours of professional development education sessions.

"The Bridges to the Future scholarship program is a great professional development experience for new and aspiring school business officials," noted John D. Musso, ASBO executive director. "It gives us the opportunity to welcome these individuals to the field and recognize their excellent work."
